

Fair train fenced in

Workmen from a Sedalia fence company put a five-foot metal fence around the old Frisco locomotive and caboose on the State Fairgrounds Thursday. The purpose of the new fence is to protect the train from vandalism and to avoid possible injury to children. The exhibit will be open during the Fair and any special events on the grounds. Crowley Fence Co. has a contract for $7,366 with the state to fence the train, some stables, and repair the fence along the south end of the Fairgrounds. A "walking gate" between the camping area and the grounds will also be built to keep pedestrians from having to use the car entrances. Here, Melvin Cramer, right, Houstonia, and Ronnie Clark, Sedalia, work on the fence near where a gate will be put.

Petition seeks blue laws' end

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — State Rep. Phillip Scaglia, D-Kansas City, delivered to the secretary of state today 108,120 signatures on petitions to eliminate the ban on Sunday sales.

Scaglia, backed by merchants in St. Louis and Kansas City, wants to repeal the Missouri law prohibiting sales on Sunday on most items except food and drugs. He says the law is vague, has too many loopholes and is not uniformly enforced.

If enough valid signatures are certified by the secretary of state, the measure will go on the November ballot.

Scaglia needed 61,000 signatures in seven of the 10 congressional districts. The petition drive lasted about eight months.

Scaglia's group did not make any effort to distinguish registered voters from those not registered, and Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick said he would not count the signatures of unregistered voters pending a decision by the Missouri Supreme Court.

The court has before it a suit by the Conservation Federation of Missouri opposing a provision in the 1973 statewide voter registration law purporting to require that all petition signers be registered.

Scaglia has failed for the past two years with bills to repeal the Sunday sales ban. Proponents say Missouri is losing millions of dollars in tax revenue because state residents go to surrounding states to buy on Sunday.

Opponents, many of them store owners, say the repeal would force stores to be open on Sunday because of competition and the merchants would be forced to pay employees an extra day a week. The measure is also opposed by some religious organizations, the Missouri Retailers

Association and the Missouri Automobile Dealers Association.

The law prohibits the retail sale on Sunday of motor vehicles, clothing, furniture, hardware, building supplies, tools, paint, jewelry, watches, luggage, toys, recordings and various other hardware.

The law allows exceptions for resort areas. It was upheld in 1964 as constitutional by the state Supreme Court.

Kitchen carpet still cloaked in mystery

The great carpet mystery remains unsolved, and it probably will remain that way.

The mystery began when Mr. and Mrs. James Melchert, 1721 South Ingram, discovered June 6 that a person or persons unknown had laid 192 square feet of kitchen carpeting in their home while they were away that morning.

"We haven't heard a thing," said Melchert. "Whoever did it obviously wants to remain anonymous."

Melchert said he heard "through the grapevine" that a local carpet company mistakenly installed the carpeting and later decided not to admit the error.

But who did it? "I really don't know," Melchert said. "All I know is that whoever it was wants to remain anonymous."

Spokesman at local carpet stores told The Democrat-Capital that, based on the description of the pickup truck that was seen at the Melchert's residence on June 6, either of two local stores could have been involved. But spokesman at both of the stores denied this.

Melchert said that somewhere in Sedalia is another house with identical carpeting. These are the persons who should have received the carpeting in the first place. Melchert said if these persons notify him, then the mystery can be cleared up.

One local carpet store spokesman said that the persons who made the mistake may wish to remain anonymous to not only avoid embarrassment, but also to avoid a possible law suit.

Melchert said he has gotten used to the carpeting now and likes it. But he still can't get over what happened.

"The more I think about it, the stupider it is."

Thousands of silent Russians greet Nixon

MOSCOW (AP) — Thousands of Russians standing in silence but waving Soviet and American flags greeted President Nixon in Moscow on Thursday for the start of his nuclear summit conference with Leonid I. Brezhnev.

The first session with the Communist party general secretary got under way in the Kremlin after an unexplained 90-minute delay.

Crowds estimated by newsmen to number about 10,000 had formed in groups on Nixon's route along a broad avenue from the airport to the Kremlin. But others who tried to join them in some areas were shunted down side streets by police shouting through bullhorns. "Not allowed! Not allowed!" This was believed to be an effort by officials to keep down the size of the crowds.

Unlike Nixon's previous visit to Moscow, the Soviet press had given wide publicity to the President's coming for his third round of summit talks with Brezhnev.

The crowd turnout was larger than when Nixon first came as president two years ago. Many carried tiny paper flags given them beforehand.

Nixon's first session with Brezhnev had been set for 5 p.m., 10 a.m., EDT. Newsmen on hand in the Kremlin for the session were suddenly put on a bus and driven away without explanation.

Deputy White House Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren indicated that no difficulties had arisen.

Nixon was greeted by Communist party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev at the VIP Vnukovo Airport which was decked out with Soviet and American flags. Brezhnev did not come to the airport two years ago to greet Nixon.

The President hoped his visit would produce a partial ban on underground nuclear weapons tests and a slowdown on nuclear arms development by the two superpowers.

The President, with Mrs. Nixon on his right, smiled and waved as he walked down the ramp of the blue and white presidential jet under bright, sunny skies. A crowd of about 400 persons was at the airport to greet Nixon.

Nixon reviewed an honor guard, which hailed him with the cheer, "We wish you health." He then heard a military band play the Soviet and American national anthems. Then he and his wife shook hands with some persons in the crowd, who were waving small American and Soviet flags.

Brezhnev and Nixon smiled frequently and chatted with each other as they walked through the crowd, and Nixon waved several times to the well-wishers, who included a contingent from the American Embassy.

Nixon then watched a brief military parade, headed into the airport lounge and prepared to motor into the city.

At the President's first Moscow summit, in May 1972, the Soviets accorded Nixon a coolly correct welcome and Soviet President Nikolai V. Podgorny was the chief greeter.

Nixon's morning flight to the Soviet capital followed a round of consultations in Brussels Wednesday with America's partners in the Atlantic Alliance and the ceremonial signing of a declaration pledging wider cooperation within the alliance.

Belgium's ruler, King Baudouin, went to the Melsbroek military airport to give the President and Mrs. Nixon a red-carpet sendoff.

The Moscow summit generally was viewed as a means of maintaining the momentum of the Soviet-American detente launched by Nixon's May 1972 trip to the Soviet capital and fostered by Brezhnev's return visit to the United States last year. No major breakthroughs were expected this time.

Some agreements are reported ready for signing, such as one to expand commercial relations. But these seem mainly designed to show the continuing cooperation between the two countries.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger told a news conference in Brussels Wednesday the summit would not produce a permanent ban on offensive missiles. Until such an agreement is reached, he said, "we are prepared to continue in the arms race as long as we must."

"We will never accept a strategic disadvantage for the United States," he declared. But "we do believe we have an obligation to see how the technological explosion may be moderated."

Kissinger said the Soviet government is "nearly ready" to deploy some missiles carrying multiple warheads. He warned that the next 18 months will be critical for the negotiations to halt proliferation of weapons of mass destruction.

He dismissed as "nonsense" a claim by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., that the administration tried to cover up a loophole in the 1972 nuclear weapons agreement permitting the Soviet Union to put 70 more missiles aboard its submarines than had been anticipated. He said the matter "never reached my desk," and the National Security Council and other agencies "constantly maintain there was no such loophole."

In Washington, Jackson reiterated his cover-up charge. He said a "clarification" agreement with the Soviets to plug the alleged loophole was kept secret from Congress, the secretaries of state and defense in office at the time, the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the Central Intelligence Agency.

"Dr. Kissinger and the President were the only ones who knew," Jackson said.

Kissinger conceded that Watergate and the President's other domestic difficulties could have an impact on the summit diplomacy. But he said "the President will not be inhibited," and "he will negotiate in what he considers to be the national interest."

Nixon and Brezhnev were to begin their talks in the late afternoon.

Witness request rejected

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney James St. Clair opened President Nixon's impeachment defense before the House Judiciary Committee today.

Entering the closed hearing, he told reporters he regarded as the most serious charge the March 21, 1973, payment of $75,000 to convicted Watergate burglar E. Howard Hunt Jr. The money, St. Clair insisted, was for Hunt's legal fees and not part of the Watergate cover-up, as has been alleged by a federal grand jury.

St. Clair's request that he be allowed to call six witnesses to buttress his case was rejected by the committee Wednesday.

The committee agreed to call two of them but said it wants the other four interviewed first by the committee staff to see if their testimony is needed.

Although the March 21 events are the focal point of St. Clair's presentation, he said he will deal with all the allegations before the committee. He presented each member with four telephone-directory sized books filled with evidence, the largest of which dealt with the Watergate cover-up.

St. Clair said he expected to be able to complete his defense in two days.

In a related development today, presidential counselor Dean Burch told of group of newsmen the refusal of the Judiciary Committee to hear six witnesses as requested by St. Clair creates "the appearance of a partisan lynch mob."

Burch said the committee decision to definitely call only two of the six is patently unfair.

"If the President had stolen a loaf of bread he could have called witnesses," Burch said.

He told newsmen that House Democratic leaders are forcing a speedup in the pace of the Judiciary Committee's impeachment investigation of Nixon.

But Burch said, "It is ludicrous to suggest that the testimony of four witnesses would disrupt the committee. I don't think three more hours is going to be the difference in making a deadline."

An effort to win approval of St. Clair's full list of witnesses failed on a 19-19 tie vote that produced a sharp partisan split in the committee and may have influenced some Republicans to vote against impeachment.

Rep. Charles W. Sandman Jr., R-N.J., who offered the losing motion to expand the witness list, said he still was undecided about how to vote. "But if I don't hear from the witnesses I want to hear I'll never vote for impeachment," he said.

Rep. Thomas F. Railsback, R-Ill., also undecided on impeachment, said he thought the committee had made "a very bad mistake" in rebuffing St. Clair.

In other Watergate-related developments:

—Former Nixon aide John D. Ehrlichman and three White House plumbers went on trial in the break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

—A confidential staff report of the Senate Watergate committee said former top campaign officials for Hubert H. Humphrey and Wilbur D. Mills have refused to testify about apparently illegal campaign donations.

Police probe is topic for City Council

The Sedalia City Council will meet behind closed doors at 7:30 o'clock tonight to discuss the continuing investigation of the Sedalia police department.

The council last met in private to discuss the matter on May 28. At that time, City Attorney Robert Liston and Mayor Jerry Jones told the council what their investigation had thus far uncovered. The council took no action then, but asked that the investigation continue.

First Ward Councilman Allen Hawkins said Thursday that tonight's meeting would be similar to the first one. "It will be informational — to see what we have found out so far," he said.

Liston said that William F. Brown, the council's retained counsel in the investigation, also would report on the legal aspects of the relationship between the council and the police department.

Jones was out of town Thursday morning and not available for comment.

Neither Liston, Hawkins nor Third Ward Councilman Carl Franklin, who was also contacted Thursday, said he knew what the council specifically would discuss tonight.

The meeting will be in the City Council chambers at the Municipal Building.

Jones initiated his investigation in April after he said he received several complaints from persons alleging possible improprieties on the part of some police officers. The City Council formally sanctioned the investigation a month later after charges of ticket fixing and intimidation were made at a public hearing.

Liston and Jones have been serving as the chief investigators in the probe.

First aid training

Lenoira Payne, 1200 State Fair Blvd., left, gave nine members of the Sedalia police and fire departments a refresher course in Red Cross first aid Thursday morning. Mrs. Payne is a dispatcher with the police department and a certified instructor in first aid. Police Chief William Miller said that most of the policemen have had the training, but this course will bring them up to date in first aid. The entire course takes eight hours and Chief Miller said that he expects everyone in the department to take it. (Democrat-Capital Photo)

Will seek parole for Lt. Calley

FT. BENNING, Ga. (AP) — One of former Lt. William L. Calley's attorneys says he plans to seek parole for Calley immediately as well as appealing through civilian courts.

Kenneth Henson said Calley readily accepted his transfer Wednesday to the military prison at Ft. Leavenworth, Kan., because it will expedite the possibility of parole.

"We'll work on two fronts now—Army parole as well as the civilian court appeal," Henson said. "We'll initiate a parole application immediately."

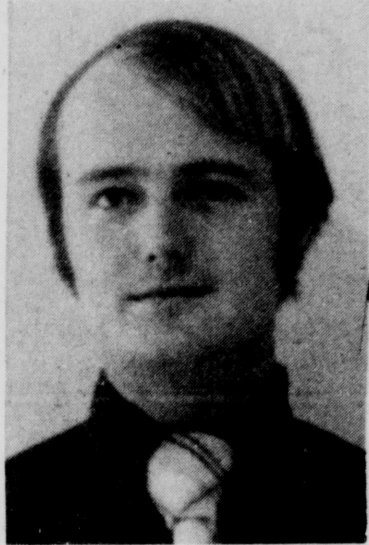

He said Calley, 31, who is serving 10 years on conviction of slaying 22 civilians at My Lai, South Vietnam, is "doing fine. I think he has a positive attitude ... it was time to go. He accepted it. He was glad to go."

Henson said he believes Calley is eligible for parole now. Calley was convicted in March 1971 and sentenced to life. The sentence was reduced to 20 years by the commanding general of the Third Army and to 10 years by Army Secretary Howard "Bo" Callaway.

"You have to serve a third of your sentence," Henson said. "It depends on whether the Army counts his time on bail. It might be four or five months."

U.S. District Court Judge J. Robert Elliott took Calley's appeal under advisement Tuesday.

During two days of hearings, Calley's attorneys argued that he was charged illegally with murder rather than a war crime, that highly placed officials influenced his case, and that he was singled out to bear full responsibility for the My Lai massacre.

He attended the University of Missouri-Columbia and received his bachelor and master of science degrees from there in animal husbandry. While at the university, he made the Dean's list and was a member of Gamma Sigma Delta.

Senior citizen 'Drop-in'

Any Sedalia senior citizen is welcome to participate, free of charge, in the Sedalia Park Department's "Drop-in" program. They meet every Wednesday from 1 to 4 p.m. at the Convention Hall in Liberty Park. Older Adults Transportation Service furnishes the transportation for those needing it.

Persons may call 827-3000 to arrange for a ride. If not ride is necessary, they only need to show up to participate in the program. Senior citizens play bingo, cards and dominos, with coffee and cookies furnished. Here, two members of the group become intensely involved in a game of dominos.

More appointments are made by Bond

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Christopher S. Bond has named two more commissions in preparation for implementation of state reorganization next week.

In announcing the appointments to the Mental Health Commission and the Labor and Industrial Relations Commission Wednesday, Bond also filled three county offices left vacant because of the death of the incumbents.

The governor named two members of the old Mental Health Commission to the new group—Dr. Phillip R. Dodge, medical director at St. Louis Children's Hospital, and Jack Stapleton Jr., publisher of the Dunklin Daily Democrat in Kennett.

With one commission post still to be filled, Bond also appointed to the Mental Health Commission Dr. George J. Lytton of Kansas City, Greene County Probate Judge Don E. Burrell, Monsanto Co., vice president Monte C. Throdahl of Ladue and Trenton Junior College teacher Tom Brown.

The Mental Health Commission will be responsible for operation of the new Department of Mental Health.

The governor, acting in accordance with a recent attorney general's opinion, reappointed three members of the current Industrial Relations Commission to the new Labor and Industrial Relations Commission, which will head the new Department of Labor and Industrial Relations.

Reappointed were commission chairman James J. Butler of Wardsville, and Carl J. Brown and George E. Taff, both of Jefferson City.

Mary Jane Degen of Washington was appointed Franklin County collector succeeding the late Robert Hoffman.

Jumbo jet makes emergency landing

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A Trans World Airlines L-1110 jumbo jet with 88 passengers made an emergency landing at Kansas City International Airport Wednesday after a tire in the landing gear ruptured on take-off at Philadelphia.

Jerry Cosley, a TWA spokesman, said the plane, which has a seating capacity of 260, landed safely at KCI and the passengers were taken to a waiting Boeing 707 for the remainder of the flight to San Francisco.

Ann Landers

Last wishes should remain sacred

Dear Ann Landers: I am a funeral director who disagrees with "Edith in Nebraska." First of all, embalming, which she calls "barbaric," is for sanitation purposes as well as for temporary preservation. Second, the viewing of the deceased, especially for members of the family, serves a vital psychological need and helps them accept the finality of death. Finally, the funeral service is for the living, not the dead. I believe the music, sermon and all decisions connected with the funeral should be made by those who are making the arrangements, and not by the one who has passed on.

The individual's wishes and preferences can, of course, be discussed with the family before death occurs, but if the family disagrees, the wishes of those left behind should take precedence, since they are the ones who are affected. — A Professional Opinion

Dear P.O.: I hate to dispute "a professional," but in MY opinion each of us should have the right to decide what we want done with our remains. It's the last thing a family can do for a loved one.

Dear Ann Landers: Can Our Gal Sunday behave herself in the little mining town in Colorado without England's richest, most handsome Lord beside her every minute?

Will Helen Trent regain her good name after being seen in a cocktail lounge unescorted?

What about Ma Perkins? Can she convince Dee Pemberton that she stopped in at Joe's Bar with her bowling team just to have a beer and that she wasn't looking to get picked up?

And finally, what will Ann

Landers say when she finds out that respectable women do go to cocktail lounges alone or with their women friends, buy their own drinks, mind their own business, and go home alone? Please, Kiddo, join the 70's. — Heavens To Betsy.

Dear Betsy: Loved your letter! Too bad nobody under 35 will know what you're talking about.

Of course there are exceptions, and you may be one, but most women who go to bars and cocktail lounges unescorted are looking for male company. This isn't to say they are looking for sex, but they ARE in search of a man to talk to. Men know this. When they see an unescorted female in a lounge, they figure she's fair game. And she usually is.

Dear Ann Landers: I have something to say to the 19-year-old girl who says men drop her when she refuses to go to bed with them. Most men, especially 19-year-olds, are not libertines.

I have no doubt she has been propositioned (hasn't everybody?), but she probably behaves like Purity Raped, which, in this day and age, is ludicrous. If a girl wants to keep a boy friend and is not interested in shacking up, she should explain that her moral scruples won't allow her to sleep with him and it has nothing to do with how desirable he is.

Most men will respect her for it. If they don't, then she hasn't lost much. Bed-hopping is not for those with fragile egos or high principles. I know because I've been there. — Dulcinella

Dear Dulci: Thanks for another testimonial. My mail reflects that more and more women are beginning to realize that what they thought was sexual freedom turned out to be "enslavement." There's no such a thing as a free lunch, girls. ©1974 Field Enterprises

Former Cuban president likely Ehrlichman witness

WASHINGTON (AP) — Among the likely witnesses in the trial of John D. Ehrlichman and three others accused in the plumbers case are a former president of Cuba, a former Treasury secretary and two policemen from California.
The four were among 57 listed as likely to appear in the trial that began with jury selection Wednesday and continues today.
They are Dr. Carlos Prio Socarra, Cuban president from 1948 to 1952, ex-Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz and Michael Haigwood and Clinton Brickley of Beverly Hills, Calif.
Former and present CIA officials, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Rep. Guy Vanderjagt, R-Mich., also are expected to appear.
Some may be called to testify to the character of one of the defendants. For example, Vanderjagt lived two doors from Ehrlichman before the White House aide resigned more than a year ago.
Ehrlichman, G. Gordon Liddy, Bernard L. Barker and Eugenio L. Martinez are accused of violating the rights of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.
Dr. Lewis Fielding's Beverly Hills, Calif., office was broken into Sept. 3, 1971, in a fruitless search for Ellsberg's files. Fielding's name also appears on the prospective witness list.

The defendants are accused of conspiring to obtain the psychiatric files of Ellsberg, former Pentagon analyst who leaked the Pentagon papers to the press.
U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell moved the jury selection process along briskly Wednesday, narrowing an initial jury pool of 120 to at least 65 persons. Gesell planned to question 37 more prospective jurors today. It is likely that defense and prosecution attorneys will

Paper says searches authorized

ST. LOUIS (AP)—At least 380 federal drug agents have been given authority to conduct searches without warrants, the Post-Dispatch said today.
The newspaper, in a story from its Washington bureau, said the unauthorized action was dictated last January by the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) after a bitter struggle that had gone on behind the scenes for six months.
The expanded authority was given to the drug agents by cross-designating them United States customs agents, the Post-Dispatch reported. Under authority first granted by the first Congress in 1789, customs agents are allowed to search persons and conveyances in border areas without first obtaining search warrants or showing probable cause.
The Fourth Amendment prohibits most other law-enforcement agents from conducting searches in that manner.
The newspaper said the cross-designation of the agents was first requested a year ago by Myles J. Ambrose, special assistant attorney general in charge of drug abuse law enforcement at the time. It also said the search power for the agents was eventually obtained by John R. Bartels Jr., administrator of the Department of Justice Drug Enforcement Administration, successor to Ambrose's division.
The Post-Dispatch said the story of the bureaucratic dispute and the constitutional question it raised is told in correspondence and other documents obtained by congressional sources, including Rep. Tom Steed, D-Okla.
The correspondence, the newspaper said, shows that Vernon D. Acree, U.S. commissioner of customs, strongly opposed giving the expanded powers to the drug agents, as did his superiors in the Department of the Treasury.
However, they eventually were overridden by the OMB, the White House agency that is headed by Roy Ash and oversees the functioning of the various departments, the Post-Dispatch story said.

A spokesman for the Drug Enforcement Administration was quoted as saying Wednesday that about 380 drug agents had been designated and expressing surprise that there still was any controversy over the matter.
The spokesman described the cross designation as "an enforcement tool that an officer can have in his back pocket to use when needed," the newspaper said. He acknowledged to the newspaper its value was that it authorized searches on mere suspicion and without probable cause.

New milk inspector gets local records

Wilmer Ziegelbein, Concordia, a Kansas City-area milk inspector for the State Milk Board, conferred Thursday in the Municipal Building with local dairy inspector Raymond Whittall.
Ziegelbein will be taking over Whittall's duties Monday as part of a state-wide consolidation effort in the area of dairy inspection.
In addition to describing the location of all area dairy operations to Ziegelbein, Whittall also turned over to the state inspector copies of all his records.
The original records will be retained in City Clerk Ralph Dedrick's office, Whittall explained.
Whittall, who will be leaving his post after 14 years as a city employee, has indicated he will retire.

select the 12 jurors and six alternates who judge the case from a final pool of about 85.
Only three prospective jurors were dismissed for doubts that they could be objective and give the defendants a fair trial.
Daniel E. Schultz, attorney for Martinez and Barker, disclosed after Wednesday's session that his clients will be seeking work while in Washington for the trial. He said both their families in Miami are supported by their wives and he indicate funds for legal fees were running short.
Liddy reported in a court brief that his wife is supporting their five children. The convicted Watergate conspirator said his personal cash assets amount to $25 in a checking account.

Local NFO officials say little of suit

The Securities and Exchange Commission has sued the National Farmers Organization (NFO) which it contends is broke and lied to its members when it borrowed more than $7 million from them.
Charles Jaeger, Smithton, secretary of the local NFO chapter, said Wednesday night he had not yet heard any word on the suit.
Jaeger denied that the local chapter of the organization is broke, but would not answer a charge on the national level whether there was trouble collecting the $75 per year dues.
"There has been effort to recover back dues, but I don't know if it has been successful locally," Jaeger said.

Jaeger admitted a letter had been distributed by the parent organization on June 13 and "I am sure it has been distributed locally."
The letter was sent by NFO president Oren Lee Staley and marked "confidential for members only — not to be released to the press."
In it Staley said the SEC investigation is the biggest problem to confront the farm group in its 18-year history.
"Back dues must be paid immediately or NFO is lost," he said. "NFO's existence depends on your decision."
When news accounts of the letter appeared, Staley denied the group is faced with financial collapse and said the SEC's complaints were technical.
Jaeger would not disclose the number of members in the local organization. NFO local president Robert Taylor, LaMonte, was not available for comment on the issue.
The organization is being charged with fraud, false statements and failure to disclose information about its financial condition.
The NFO Board, in an emergency meeting Tuesday, denied any fraud and requested the commission make a more thorough investigation.
Staley charged the action is a result of the organization being on the White House enemies list revealed by former presidential counsel John Dean III.
The suit charges that the organization is in the red and cannot pay its bills.
The suit asks for a court order to prevent the NFO from continuing its allegedly misleading practices, and for a special auditor to determine the NFO's true financial condition.
In St. Paul, Minn., the Minnesota Securities Commissioner has ordered a show-cause hearing into a borrowing program of the NFO, saying the organization may be in violation of Minnesota state laws.
The hearing in Minnesota is scheduled for July 25. Minnesota is not alleging fraud but suggests the NFO borrowing program is a security and must be registered. It is not presently registered.

Senate passes extension for GI benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has passed unanimously and sent to the House legislation to keep benefits from expiring for four million veterans who served between 1955 and 1966.
The measure would affect immediately some 206,000 post-Korea veterans and 79,000 Vietnam-era veterans currently receiving education benefits under the GI Bill. Without the extension, their benefits would expire automatically after this week.
The Senate action came Wednesday as the Senate and House veterans affairs committees remained deadlocked on how much veterans' benefits should be boosted over-all.
The Senate bill would increase GI Bill benefits by 18.2 per cent, offer veterans up to $720 a year in tuition costs, provide as much as $2,000 a year in federal loans and expand the maximum time period for benefits from 36 to 45 months.
The House has approved a bill to provide a 13.6 per cent cost of living increase. The House bill, however, would not provide tuition grants, loans and a longer benefits period.
Also on Wednesday, the Senate passed unanimously and sent to the White House a bill appropriating funds for 15 to 18 per cent cost-of-living increases to some 2.2 million disabled veterans and 375,000 widows, children and parents of men who died of service-connected causes.
President Nixon last month signed legislation authorizing the boosts.

'Domestic detente' is invited

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — The new president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors has invited President Nixon to establish a reconciliation with city leaders and create "a domestic detente" on the urban front.
San Francisco Mayor Joseph L. Alioto, a Democrat, said the problems of the cities demand as much attention from the President as do international affairs.
Alioto took over leadership of the conference Wednesday from Norfolk Mayor Roy B. Martin Jr., also a Democrat, at the conclusion of the organization's 42nd annual meeting.
New Orleans Mayor Moon Landrieu was named vice president and Kenneth Gibson of Newark, N.J., was elected chairman of the advisory board, putting him third in line for the presidency.
If tradition is followed, Gibson will take over in 1976 as the conference's first black president.
The 350 mayors also asked both Nixon and the Congress to continue the New Federalism by re-enacting general revenue sharing at least a year before its expiration in 1976.
They called for an end to impoundment by the President of congressionally appropriated funds and sought quick passage of an $11.3 billion housing and community development act and $18 billion in transit subsidies over the next five years.
Administration emissaries to the conference said that was more money than the cities were likely to get in view of the battle against inflation through federal budget restraints.
The major debate Wednesday came over how future revenue sharing funds should be disbursed: Under the current population formula or on a basis of need.

Dallas Mayor Wes Wise led a coalition of the major growth cities in defeating a move to ask Congress to give a bigger share of federal aid to cities which can demonstrate a greater need for the funds because of more acute poverty, blight and other factors.

Alioto declared that the cities have been orphans who still have to beg for help "while one Arab nation is promised unhesitatingly $100 million in economic aid and Israel and Egypt are offered untold millions in nuclear capability.

"The national administration persists in its apparent ignorance of the debt—the continuing debt—owed to the cities of this nation."

Then he moderated his tone, saying he wanted to work with the President as spokesman for the mayors, not bicker with him.

Fire departments study is planned

The Pettis County Court Thursday morning commissioned Stanley L. Ponce, area community development specialist for the University of Missouri Extension Service, to conduct a survey of fire departments in Pettis County.
The survey is part of a County Court study into ways to improve fire protection in Pettis County.
Ponce said he will personally visit each fire department in the county to determine such information as the extent of fire protection, the number of active firefighters and the organization of the department.
Ponce said he hopes to report his findings to the County Court on July 15.
Ponce also presented the three judges with informational sheets explaining the organizational differences between a fire protection association and a fire protection district.

Socialists submit state candidate

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Bolstered by 11,000 more signatures than needed, officials of the Socialist Workers party submitted petitions to the secretary of state's office today in an attempt to place a candidate on the ballot for the first time in Missouri.
Officials in the secretary of state's office said it will take about three weeks to certify the signatures.
Barbara Mutnick, the party's only candidate, will oppose nominees from the Democratic and Republican parties for the U.S. Senate seat now held by Democrat Thomas Eagleton if the petitions are certified.

Mrs. Mutnick needed 18,000 signatures supporting her addition to the November ballot by next Friday, but she told newsmen more than 29,000 signatures were collected in a 3 1/2 week period. She said getting so many signatures in such a short period indicated the kind of showing the Socialists Workers Party will make in November.

The majority of the signatures were collected in the state's two metropolitan areas, she said. She indicated the party would not take the seat because it will not be given a fair hearing around the state.
Her campaign, she said, is being financed primarily through small donations from individuals with about $3,000 collected since she announced her candidacy last March.
Mrs. Mutnick said, however, she will not release lists of her contributors and does not back the initiative drive to place campaign spending reform on the November ballot.

Further tax reform efforts are pledged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate liberals have pledged to fight another day for tax reform after giving up on their efforts to attach such measures to the debt-limit increase bill.
But their chances of finding another vehicle for the fight in the 1974 session seemed dubious.
And their hopes of enacting an income tax cut, which they also tried unsuccessfully to attach to the debt ceiling measure, appeared to be slim, especially if the economy moves upward in the second half of the year as the Nixon administration predicts.
The liberals abandoned their fight on the debt limit bill Wednesday after falling far short in another attempt to impose cloture and cut off a filibuster against their riders to the bill.
The Senate then passed the bill 58-37 and sent it to President Nixon, who is expected to sign it promptly in Moscow.
The measure boosts the temporary $475.7-billion debt limit to $495 billion through next March 31. Unless it is signed by Sunday, the ceiling will drop to the permanent $400-billion figure, which would cause serious financial difficulties. The federal debt now is close to $475 billion.
Chairman Russell B. Long, D-La., of the Senate Finance Committee told the liberals the House is working on two tax reform bills on which they could renew their battle when these reach the Senate.
But one, a bill boosting levies on oil companies, is before the House Rules Committee, where its fate is uncertain.
The other, a broad tax-reform measure, still is under consideration in the Ways and Means Committee.
Its chances of passing the House seem to depend on whether it is ready before the Judiciary Committee acts on the impeachment issue.

Woman involved in second blaze in New Franklin

NEW FRANKLIN, Mo. (AP) — The state fire marshal's office is investigating the second trailer fire in three weeks involving Mrs. Sandra Strope of New Franklin.
Mrs. Strope and her son, Kevin, 4, escaped injury early today when fire destroyed the mobile home of her mother, Mrs. Betty Elder.
They had been staying with Mrs. Elder since fire destroyed the Strope mobile home here June 6, taking the lives of Mrs. Strope's twin children, 2-year-old Terie and Cherie. The bodies of the children were later ordered exhumed from a Jefferson City cemetery and a Howard County coroner's jury ruled that a felonious act was involved in the fire that killed the twins.
Authorities said Mrs. Strope moved here about six months ago from Jefferson City following a divorce.
The New Franklin Fire Department was at the scene of this morning's blaze for about three hours. Mrs. Elder was not home at the time the fire was discovered.
Mrs. Strope was admitted to a Boonville hospital suffering from shock.

Hyperactivity drugs said used too often

By C.G. McDANIEL
AP Science Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — About twice as many children are being given drugs for hyperactivity as should be, says an Ohio researcher.

He says the drugs are administered for the benefit of teachers and parents who simply want to control unruly children. The researcher, Dr. Herbert E. Rie, told said Tuesday at the American Medical Association's annual meeting children who have not been thoroughly examined are being labeled hyperactive.

The diagnosis, and prescription of drugs, is being made on the basis of parents' and teachers' reports and superficial examination, he claimed.

Rie, professor of pediatrics and psychology at Ohio State University, told newsmen later that about 4 per cent of children are deemed hyperactive, while probably only 2 per cent actually are, based on thorough neurological and psychological examinations.

A child's agitated behavior may grow out of environmental and not neurological conditions, he said.

"It is my impression that the physician often relies upon parental or school complaints as the primary basis for his diagnosis of hyperactivity," Rie said. "Kids whom people don't tolerate for many reasons are given this label."

Stimulant medications, which have the effect of making children more tranquil, have been considered to make children more attentive and thereby enable them to learn more.

But Rie said just because they're quiet doesn't mean they're learning any more. Studies at Ohio State have shown learning is not increased, he added.

Rie said that paradoxically, underachieving children who are disruptive receive attention and special help, but after they are drugged into submission they are ignored because they are quiet.

He said hyperactivity may camouflage a child's other problems and treating this behavior alone may be inadequate. He said children should be evaluated for learning difficulties or emotional problems so that these problems might be treated if they are the cause of the child's difficulties.

Palestinian attack

Palestinian guerrillas took responsibility for an attack early Tuesday on the Israeli seacoast town of Nahariyya and said it was a reprisal for Israeli air raids on Palestinian refugee camps in Lebanon. Seven persons were killed, including an Israeli woman and her two children who tried to escape the guerrillas by jumping out of a window. The three attacking guerrillas were cut down when Israeli troops blasted their way into an apartment building where they were holding out. (UPI)

Banks qualify for deposits

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Twenty-two banks have already qualified for state deposits under the new student loan discretionary time deposit program, state Treasurer James I. Spainhower announced.

The banks sharing in the first round of deposits, totaling $4.5 million under the plan to encourage banks to make student loans, will receive the funds July 1, Spainhower said, adding that more banks are expected to qualify in the coming months.

"Applications received by our office indicate more than 70 banks already involved in the student loan operation, and I think we will see that number grow," Spainhower said.

Under the program, the state will place interest-bearing deposits with banks displaying an above average participation in the student loan program.

Spainhower said $5 million to $10 million will be set aside annually for deposit in banks meeting the requirements.

The banks and the deposits to be received are:

Nashville's Music Row growing

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Music Row. The name evokes a bucolic boulevard of country balladists, tobacco-chewing tunesmiths, good ol' boys who came here barefoot, with no other visible means of support than a dream, and who currently drive Cadillacs.

Now Music Row, 1974, encompasses about five blocks. It's still down-home, still tree-lined, but its music and loot therefrom no longer is pure country. It's also pop, soul and jingles. Jingles? Yeah, those 30-and 60-second radio or TV ditties that urge you to fly United, drink Miller beer, shave with Gillette and hopefully keep on truckin' in a GMC model. All were recorded here. And though Nashville's jingle works still is small by New York or Los Angeles standards, it's growing. One union official claims work here is up "at least 100 per cent from three years ago."

He's Paul Wilder, secretary of the local American Federation of Radio and Television Artists — AFTRA — office.

Wilder, a lean, tanned man, says when he joined the local eight years ago it only had 43 members. Now it has 600, he says, and 50 per cent of them regularly announce on or sing in jingles here.

He partly attributes the growth to a local fee, set in 1970, that was so rock-bottom "we almost gave it away. But it's also due to the wealth of talent we have, the 'sound' they get."

"Our problem was, how do you get major ad agencies to at least come see what we have here? And the answer was the local rate."

He said it only applies to commercials aired here. The far higher rate for commercials destined for national or major market broadcast is the same as in Los Angeles and New York.

"But at least it got our foot in the door," he said.

Blind fisherman enjoys sport

By NORM CLARKE
AP Sports Writer
CINCINNATI (AP) — "You give me good friends, a fishing pole and plenty of water and I'm happy," says 66-year-old Merrill Cook.

In that respect, Cook differs little from the nation's army of 70 million anglers. What distinguishes the aging outdoorsman as a breed apart from his colleagues is his blindness.

While the exhilaration of seeing his finned quarry fight the line is gone, the loss of sight has not diminished his love of the sport.

"I thank God that fishing has always been my favorite hobby. I appreciate it more now than ever because of my great friends," said the Lebanon, Ohio, native.

Cook, a body shop operator until disabled by an eye disease in 1971, lost his sight while on a grouse-hunting venture in southern Ohio.

The spunky oldtimer's lifelong pursuit of fishing a razor-sharp memory has helped him locate many of his favorite haunts.

"I used to fish seven days a week, but now I can only make twice a week. But I still have a mental picture of my best spots. I should. I spent enough time at them. I tell my friends the way I remember it—if there's stump nearby or a big rock. It's just like a professional golfer. You never forget some things," said Cook.

One of his companions says Cook's years of fishing allow him to transcend his handicap.

Casting problems are quickly overcome with some advice from his friends.

"After a couple of casts he can hit that shoreline as well as you or I without fouling the bait, something those so-called experts can't even do," says fishing mate Bob Peach.

The rest of it is reduced to angling instincts and the "feel" technique.

His favorite fish: "The black bass is the sportiest fish in these parts," says Cook.

He uses a lighter rod equipped with an automatic fly reel that retrieves the line by pressing a lever. Cook says it allows him to play a fish better and let out more line if he hooks a larger one.

Cook's idea of a hearty meal is a frying pan full of sizzling fish filets. Even the tricky problem of cooking has been met by the tanned outdoorsman.

Peach remembers the first time Cook's appetite won out over a fear of burning himself.

"He called me to come over during lunch and cook the fish, but I couldn't get away," remembers Peach.

"So Cookie cooked his own fish and ate them. How did he do it? Well, he told me he just put them in the skillet and counted up to 180, which he figured was three minutes of cooking time and then turned off the stove," said Peach.

YOU CAN FIGURE OUT HOW MUCH PAINT YOU NEED

Measure the distance around your house. (In feet.) And measure the average height. (For a pitched roof, figure "average height" to eaves; plus two feet for gable ends.)

Then multiply distance by height, to get the approximate number of square feet to be painted. Divide the number by the coverage you can expect from each gallon of paint you're using, and you'll know about how many gallons you'll need.

Of course, coverage varies depending on the surface you're painting. But generally, you can expect a Sherwin-Williams Latex House Paint to cover about 400 square feet per gallon. So, in the example, you'd need about 4 and 1/2 gallons.

Insulin is not found in foods

Dear Dr. Lamb — I wonder if you could give me some information on diabetes. I am a diabetic and am trying to find foods that contain insulin, such as artichokes and sweet-breads. Could you help me or tell me where to write for the information?

Dear Reader — I don't know where you got the idea, but you might as well forget about it. Insulin is a complex protein. That means it is formed by hooking together over 50 amino acids. All proteins are formed by hooking together various combinations of amino acids, just as words are formed by hooking together letters in the alphabet.

The rub is that your digestive system is designed to break down proteins into the original building blocks of amino acids. Just as the protein in milk, beef, fish, eggs and other goods is broken down, so are any protein medicines you swallow.

The acid pepsin juice in the stomach starts the process. The rest is accomplished in the small intestine as a result of enzymes from the pancreas and intestinal wall. What gets through the intestinal wall into the body then is just the building blocks and these are all the same whether they came from meat, milk, wheat or other sources. This is just like breaking down a lot of words. The letter "a" is the same "a" whether it comes from one word or another word.

So, insulin has to be given by injection. This way the protein avoids being broken by digestion into its common building blocks. The insulin can then be active in the body. Digested insulin is just a collection of disconnected amino acids and has no effect on diabetes or the blood sugar.

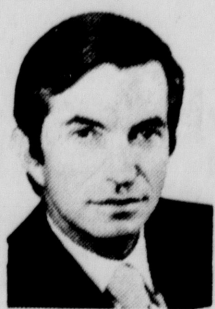

Dear Dr. Lamb — I sent for a book advertised in the Farmer's Almanac titled "Sole Food vs. Fresh Food" and was really shocked at some of the things they said were bad for your arteries, like flour and cereals and ham and bacon and you should drink raw milk. Is there any truth in a diet like that, and wouldn't you get some other disease drinking raw milk? Would like your opinion on this diet as I do have trouble with arthritis and my husband has trouble with his arteries. I just wondered by eating all fresh food and raw milk whether it really would improve your arteries.

Dear Reader — In a word "GHASTLY." Raw milk went out with the dark ages. Happily we do have pasteurized milk and in most places it is required. As a result our children are not exposed to many diseases that are milk borne.

Widespread areas of the Midwest once had cattle with brucellosis, a disease they then transmitted to humans who drank the raw, infected milk.

That is only one disease that milk can carry. Milk is good food, even for growing germs. You don't need to tell me anything else about that diet. If it is as far off the truth as the bit about raw milk indicates, it is probably a public health menace. Throw it away and save yourself the doctor bills it could cause you.

Wild game
trade set up for Missouri

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The largest interstate trade of wild game involving Missouri has been approved by the state Conservation Commission.

The commission said Wednesday that over the next three years Missouri will send 260 wild turkeys to Iowa in return for 5,000 Iowa pheasants.

The trade, according to offi-

The Sedalia Democrat, Thursday, June 27, 1974—7

cials, is aimed at extending the state's pheasant range from the 17 counties in which pheasant hunting is currently permitted.

The commission also said trades are being planned with both Texas and Wisconsin in which wild turkeys from Missouri will be exchanged for ruffed grouse.

Missouri is able to use some of its wild turkeys in trades for other wild game because the wild turkey population in the state has passed the optimum point, said Dan Dickneite, special programs biologist for the state Conservation Department.

Museum preserves records

TAIPEI (AP) — Hundreds of handwritten emperors' notes — on subjects ranging from the imperial health to the conduct of wars — are preserved in Taiwan's National Palace Museum. Along with clothing and personal possessions of China's later rulers, they offer human sidelights on the men who ran the world's oldest continuous empire until their world collapsed in revolution in 1911.

The museum's priceless collections of art and documents were brought along by the Nationalist Chinese government when it fled Mainland China for Taiwan in 1949. Jade and coral hair pins, golden finger-nail guards and, for the man who has everything, a gold-painted ostrich egg, all adorn the museum's spacious display cases.

Among them are several types of court records, reports and instructions for China's last dynasty, the Ching, which was founded in 1644 — 24 years after the Pilgrims landed in America. One type, called the "Diary of Action and Repose," records what emperors did and said on each day of the dynasty's 267 years, officials say.

They're nothing if not complete, as befits the country which some say contained one half of all the world's printed books in 1800.

For example, the court diary for July 4, 1776, the day the U.S. Declaration of Independence was signed, says: "The emperor went to the temple of the city god to offer incense. On this day the imperial entourage was in residence at the Jehol summer palace."

Now that was a slow day. In fact, it was a slow summer, as the emperor was off until Sept. 27.

But other entries are packed with the action of empire.

At almost the same time as the American Civil War, China had its own domestic conflict raging. The day Confederate forces in Charleston, S.C., fired on Fort Sumter, the Emperor Hsien-Feng received a report on an action against "bandits," which is what Chinese like to call civil war opponents.

It may seem strange that emperors had the time not only to read all these reports, but also to write their own comments at the end — usually a simple "read," or "noted," but frequently detailed instructions. Sometimes the red ink — which could only be used by emperors themselves — even appears filling in the blanks on routine forms for the payment of funds or appointing officials.

Many scholars, however, maintain that this guarantee of a personal reply from the emperor, along with the status it conferred and supervision it implied, was a key factor in maintaining officials' loyalty to the government.

Personal asides also sometimes crept into the day's business. On July 6, 1797, Chienlung wrote on one report: "I am deeply concerned about my health. Today, on seeing this report, I feel a little better."

Many documents also record the emperors' importance in the myriad customs that were then considered vital to maintaining the empire and which still strongly influence Chinese culture today. Respect for elders is frequently noted.

Even the worldwide power of secretaries to make their bosses look good or bad comes out in the documents. Records for one day in 1865 contain a line that must have taken some careful planning.

Hidden among reports of famine relief, enforcement of salt tax inspections and some silk and silver for a man who had passed the age of 100, is this brief line in the floweriest phrases of an elaborate language: "The emperor called on the imperial mother."

What the secretaries of the day neglected to mention was that the emperor was 10 years old at the time.

Farm roundup

Delayed planting trend persists in Corn Belt

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A familiar pattern of delayed planting in the Corn Belt persists, with 5 per cent of the acreage remaining to be planted in Illinois and Indiana, says the Agriculture Department.

Most corn has emerged in Iowa but heavy rains and erosion have cut into stands in parts of the state, the department said Tuesday in a weekly weather report. It followed a special report on Monday showing the 1974 corn crop nationally will be down nearly 300 million bushels from earlier indications.

Moreover, the weather report said, corn development varies widely throughout the Midwest, from newly emerged seedlings to plants seven inches high in Michigan and Indiana; 15 inches in Ohio; and up to three feet in southern Nebraska.

Farmers began catching up rapidly on soybean planting last week, the report said, with about 81 per cent of the crop planted in the Corn Belt, compared with 85 per cent last year on June 23 and 93 per cent normally.

The wheat harvest gained last week and moved ahead of normal in much of the southern Great Plains. The report said the Texas harvest was 86 per cent finished by last weekend, about double the progress of last year. Oklahoma farmers were winding up, and in Kansas 35 per cent of the crop was cut by last Sunday.

Cotton farmers in Texas moved to 94 per cent completion in planting their 1974 crop last week, behind a year-earlier pace of 99 per cent, the report said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Expects in the Agriculture Department say the Soviet Union has shifted some of its spring wheat acreage to other crops for 1974 harvest but do not think the Russians will be looking to buy additional wheat in the coming year because of it.

Officials said Tuesday in a report on Soviet grain prospects that overall output should be on target with Moscow's goal this year of 205 million metric tons. Last year, rebounding from a short 1972 harvest, production was a record 222.5 million tons.

The report said Soviet wheat production this year now is indicated at 95 million tons, down five million from earlier prospects. But the decline has been made up by improved prospects for other grains, including barley, oats, corn and rye, officials said.

"The reduced estimate of wheat output does not necessarily imply any increased trade requirements, since a large share of wheat in the USSR is fed to livestock," the report said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's orchards will produce a larger net supply of noncitrus fruit this year, says the Agriculture Department.

Prospects call for larger crops of some peaches, tart cherries, plums and nectarines, but there will be fewer apricots, southeastern peaches, sweet cherries and western Bartlett pears.

River owners fighting Stockton Dam engineers

By HUELL E. WARREN
Associated Press Writer
STOCKTON, Mo. (AP) —
“They’re just a bunch of land-grabbers... they’re not going to get it,” said Dean Dawes.

The 35-year-old farmer has lived nearly all his life on a hill overlooking the Sac River in southwest Missouri and the “it” he was talking about is a 120-acre bottomland field which he owns, rents and tills.

The Army’s district engineer in Kansas City has forwarded up the chain of command a recommendation that the government buy 2,500 acres or more along 16 miles of the river below Stockton Dam.

The turbine in the dam is designed to generate up to almost 52,000 kilowatts of electricity, spewing out water at up to 11,000 cubic feet per second. But when they first tried it in November of 1972, the Army Engineers discovered that the bank-full Sac can carry off only about 5,100 cubic feet a second, and that only in short bursts of six to eight hours a day.

Ever since that first trial run wrought havoc along the 16 miles to Caplinger Mills, Mo., and indicated there would be more trouble for another five miles down the river, many of the landowners have been fighting the engineers with recriminations.

Clark I. Montgomery said the notification of the decision to buy up the bottomland was typical.

Montgomery didn’t get one of the 68 letters addressed to landowners by Col. W.R. Needham, the district engineer in Kansas City. He owns, manages or rents out about 2,500 acres for members of his family, so his father got one — with the wrong initials. The post office people in Stockton, official population 1,063, recognized Montgomery’s relationship with some of the other addresses, and he forwarded them to such places as Aurora, Mo., and Vinita, Okla.

Montgomery, his wife and a couple from St. Louis who are long-time friends, took a six-hour float trip down the Sac on Sunday from a highway bridge just below the dam to another about half way to Caplinger Mills.

“There has been a lot more erosion, and there are a lot more trees in the river since last year,” Montgomery said. “I’m no engineer, but it looks to me like they could come in there with a drag line and in very little time straighten it out and open it up so it could handle the water.”

Enlarging the channel was one of the options rejected by Col. Needham when he decided to recommend that the government buy the bottomland. He figured the cost at over $5.7 million and expressed a doubt that the environmentalists would ever stand for it.

The estimated cost of buying the land, figuring an average of $600 an acre and other expenses, is estimated at $2,925,000 between the dam and Caplinger Mills.

Col. Needham said he had carefully considered the complaints of the landowners.

“However, I must act in behalf of all the citizens of the United States.”

Montgomery acted upon the line in a quick letter he got off Monday to Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., and other members of the state’s delegations in Congress.

... the steel worker in Gary, Indiana... the taxi driver in Houston... the coal miner in Kentucky... the real estate dealer in suburban Los Angeles... ghetto dwellers in inner cities — what we’d like to know is who is acting on behalf of all the landowners along the Sac River?” Montgomery wrote.

Dean Dawes didn’t get a letter either, but his invalid father did. As in Montgomery’s case, the land records at the Cedar County courthouse in Stockton haven’t caught up with the fact that Dean bought the 185-acre farm from his father.

About 40 of those acres, along with 80 rented from Montgomery, make up what has become known as Keith’s Island.

“My dad farmed that land for 23 straight years until his health got bad,” Dawes said. “The rest of our farm is mostly hilly. That bottom field has always provided the feed for the livestock and the cash crop.”

In all that time, the younger Dawes recounted, his father never had a complete crop failure because of flooding. He was able to save some of his corn or get in and sow a late crop or use it for pasture.

From November of 1972, when the engineers started their flow tests, until July 3, 1973, Dawes says he was never able to get to Keith’s Island.

“I filed just a little claim for $4,000 in crop loss,” he said. “The only thing I’ve ever heard from it was a one-paragraph letter 5½ weeks later saying they’d forwarded it to some place in Maryland.”

Much of the time since the first burst of outrage from the landowners, the engineers have held the water discharge to around the 5,100 cubic feet per second which the Sac can handle in six-hour bursts.

Heavy rains in the spring of 1973 and the growing demand for power resulted in more flooding.

Last fall, when the discharges were limited to six hours a day and five days a week, Dean Dawes planted a wheat crop on Keith’s Island.

A week ago Saturday, the wheat wasn’t quite ready and Dean’s father-in-law was using his combine in his own fields. The wheat was ready after the weekend, but the water was up again and the combine still wasn’t available.

“Last Saturday we went in and got the wheat out,” Dawes reported. “It ran 28 to 29 bushels to the acre and will figure out to about $8,000.”

While the water was down for the weekend, Dean moved two tractors, two plows and a disc harrow onto the island.

He planned to put in a milo crop this week, hauling a boat across to the island each morning when the river was down so he could get back home in the evening when the daily discharge from the dam still was flowing high.

But Dean Dawes spent Sunday night getting the two tractors, the two plows and the disc harrow back from Keith’s Island.

An acquaintance who works for the Corps of Engineers tipped him that at 7 a.m. Monday morning the dam would start disgorging its 5,100 cubic feet per second for 16 hours a day for about two weeks. The water would never recede enough for him to get to and from the island, and he figured two more weeks would be too late to plant milo.

“They really didn’t warn anybody,” Dawes said, “but the fellows at the power plant are very cooperative. They got the word from Kansas City on Friday.”

The orders were to run the water 16 hours a day until the 25,000-acre lake on the north fringe of the Ozarks has been lowered about 3.6 feet to its normal power-pool level.

Dawes said the reason he heard is that the higher level was flooding and washing out the road loops through one or two camp grounds in the lake’s public use areas.

Dawes thinks the engineers ought to re-design the generator so it can run effectively without discharging so much water.

“They haven’t got enough water in that lake to keep it running at 8,000 cubic feet a second or 11,000 cubic feet a second for more than 35 or 40 days a year,” he said.

After reading the letter, Dawes still could not bring himself to believe that the engineers would want to buy 2,500 acres and that it almost certainly would include all of Keith’s Island.

At a public meeting with Col. Needham in Stockton on April 1, Dawes saw a rough map which he interpreted as indicating the government might want to buy all but 75 of his 185 acres, leaving him the farmstead and only marginally productive acres.

“There’s not another place in the country I’d trade that bottomland for,” he said.

“It will wipe out all the farmers who depend on bottomland. I feel pretty sick.”

I'm going to do something special to celebrate Missouri State Bank's birthday...when I get around to it!

Ray ends career of 49 years

George Ray, 421 East 15th, currently manager of the Central Missouri Electric Cooperative, North Highway 65, will retire Friday after 49 years of work in the electrical field.

Ray, a native of Texas, began his career with the Central Power and Light Co., Pharr, Tex., and assumed his first Missouri position in 1928 with the old City Light and Traction Co., in Sedalia. He returned to Texas in 1935 and came back to Sedalia in 1945. He has remained in the state since that time.

He was promoted to manager of the local cooperative, which serves Pettis and Saline Counties, and the northern half of Benton County, in 1953, after

Family argument ends in shooting

KANSAS CITY (AP) — James Willard, 49, was shot to death in a house on Kansas City's east side Wednesday night following what police said was a family argument.

Officers said Willard was shot several times in the chest with a small caliber revolver.

Killed in accident

ST. CHARLES, Mo. (AP) — Raymond A. Kimberly, 26, Winfield, Mo., was killed early today in a one car accident in St. Charles County.

Authorities said his car left the road on a curve, struck some posts at the entrance to a service station and overturned.

Symington asks for testimony

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Stuart Symington says he wants the Senate Armed Services Committee to question Charles Colson under oath on his knowledge of CIA involvement in Watergate.

Symington made the comment Wednesday on the CBS radio program "Capitol Cloakroom", saying he had asked committee chairman John C. Stennis, D-Miss., to call Colson, a former White House aide, as a witness.

Symington, who headed the committee's investigation into allegations of CIA involvement, said he did not give credence to Colson's statement that President Nixon was concerned that the CIA was involved "up to its eyeballs."

He said Colson was one of the small circle of men surrounding the President who did everything they could to protect his position.

"It is a fact that nearly everything they worked on was polluted, whether it was an agency or a person," Symington said.

"I think they were quite successful in polluting the Federal Bureau of Investigation and I think they tried very hard to do the same thing with the CIA," he said.

However, Symington said the CIA was successful in resisting White House pressure to become involved in the Watergate coverup.

Vietnam War foe is dead at age of 87

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Sen. Ernest Gruening of Alaska, one of the earliest and strongest congressional opponents of the Vietnam war, is dead.

Gruening, 87, died Wednesday night in a Washington hospital of cancer of the colon.

He was one of two senators to vote against the 1964 Tonkin Gulf resolution, which President Lyndon B. Johnson used as a functional declaration of war in Southeast Asia.

"All Vietnam is not worth the life of a single American boy," Gruening once said.

The resolution, approved by Congress two days after Johnson requested it, authorized in advance the President's using "all necessary steps, including the use of armed force" in Vietnam.

The resolution was approved unanimously by the House. Former Sen. Wayne L. Morse, D-Ore., was the only other Senate dissenter.

Gruening voted against all appropriations to the war effort until his defeat in the Democratic primary in 1968.

He crusaded for various causes, including population control and statehood for Alaska, during careers as journalist and public official.

A New York native, he was graduated from Harvard Medical School in 1912 but he never practiced medicine. Instead he worked 22 years as editor and reporter for various newspapers and magazines, among them the liberal magazine, The Nation, for which he was managing editor.

In 1939, Gruening was appointed governor of Alaska and promptly hung a prophetic 50-star flag on the front of the mansion in Juneau. "A democracy has no business having colonies," he said.

He was governor of the territory for 14 years and after statehood became one of Alaska's first two elected senators.

After a decade in the Senate, Gruening's age and resentment to his superdove stance caught up with him in 1968, when he lost the Democratic nomination to Sen. Mike Gravel.

Out of office at age 81, Gruening went back to journalism, rejoining The Nation as an editorial associate.

Lynn Anderson moved country

By SYLVIA RECTOR
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — History may record Lawrence Welk, a bandleader and Lynn Anderson as the beginning of the Great New York Awakening.

It was 1966 when the champagne music-maker deemed the Nashville sound sophisticated enough for network audiences. He would show the nation the new, high-stepping world of modern country.

Lights. Action. Cameras zoomed in on vivacious, lithe, honey-haired Lynn Anderson, garbed in high-button shoes, clutching a parasol and hefting a bustle under a full cotton skirt.

Welk gave a lively "one-and-a-two" and Lynn began belting out a swinging version of "Buttons and Bows."

"I felt like I should have been in some old Bob Hope movie," she quipped, remembering the episode and scooting in her chair, the bustle still haunting her.

"I told him I really liked doing his show. But I said, 'If this is what I have to do, I just can't. I just don't feel comfortable in a bustle,'" she shrugged.

"Those first two or three weeks they had their own ideas of what I should sound like and look like."

"But things got better after awhile. I think they eventually got the hang of it. And they began to realize that 'Buttons and Bows' was not what modern country's all about."

At 26, the native Californian is one of the industry's female superstars. The Welk gig marked her as the first country singer booked regularly on a network show. And when "I Never Promised You a Rose Garden" crossed over to the pop charts in 1971, her audience broadened even more.

"It's really hard to get away from stereotypes," she said. "It's taken them a long time to realize that all country singers aren't from somewhere in the Deep South, that they're not all stupid and that, just like people in New York, they're individuals."

Shortly after Lynn came to the Welk show, other country singers began showing up on the networks. And big-gun entertainment dealers were hustling to close their cultural gap in country. But the industry wasn't letting the grass grow under its feet while the duds rushed to catch up.

"Music never stops developing. But people still try to label it. Look at Roy Acuff and then compare him with Waylon Jennings. They're so different it's like night and day. But they're both still called country."

"There's about five different kinds of country music and country entertainers. I'm not even sure there is one definition for country music right now. And I'm not sure it needs a definition.

"I'll be so glad when people quit labeling things and get away from their stereotypes," she said.

If "country music" is hard to define, the "Nashville Sound" is even more elusive.

Lynn credits the sound to backup musicians.

"I think it goes back to the side men. In Nashville, when you go into a session, the musicians don't go in with any sheet music. They listen to a demo tape and then everybody starts deciding how his part should sound.

"Lots of them don't even read music, you know. So, by the time you've finished a session, it's really the expertise of six or seven men and not the ideas of just one arranger. Everybody brings his own talent to the session and the music never sounds like it came off a sheet of paper."

If she has one guiding rule in performing, it's quality.

"I don't go into a session with pre-conceived ideas. We try to record the best possible arrangement of whatever song it is. And I don't aim for crossovers. If they happen, that's great.

"Country fans are loyal, not only to the performer but to the music. And if you get too revolutionary, they won't accept it."

"I don't ever want my fans to think I've abandoned them."

WORLD ALMANAC
FACTS

At the 50th anniversary celebration of the Statue of Liberty in 1936, President Franklin D. Roosevelt said: "The realization that we are all bound together by hope of a common future rather than by reverence for a common past has helped us to build upon this continent a unity unapproached in any similar area or similar-size population in the whole world." The World Almanac notes.

Art Buchwald

Dine now in Paris, pay later

PARIS — The last time I was in Paris, six years ago, I wrote a column titled "Paris on $500 a Day." The thrust of the piece was that it was still possible to get by in the French capital on $500 if you passed up lunch. My French friends, as well as Americans living in France, thought the article was very funny. But they aren't laughing any more.

Buchwald

When it comes to inflation, the United States is "Mary Poppins" and France is "Deep Throat." But if you don't worry about prices, you can still have a marvelous time in Paris. What you have to do is forget everything and just decide to live for the moment.

I did this the first night I arrived in town. My wife and I went to a small bistro that boasted two stars in the Guide Michelin.

When the waiter gave us the menu, I thought he made a mistake.

"I beg your pardon, monsieur," I said. "But I believe you have made an error. You gave me the Bank of France's financial report for the month of May." "No, monsieur, that is the carte pour dinner."

My wife, who always gets nervous when she sees melon selling for more than $15 a portion, whispered to me, "Let's get out of here."

"Don't be silly. We don't get to Paris very often. Let's enjoy it," I studied the menu carefully. "Now we have our choice. We can have the white asparagus or send Joel to college in the fall."

She said: "You mean to say that white asparagus costs as much as Joel's tuition?"

"Yes," I replied, "but they're the large white ones with Hollandaise sauce. You can only get them in the spring."

"But," my wife, always the practical one, said, "Joel had his heart set on going to college."

"Look, Joel can go to school any time. But how often do we come to France and have a chance to order white asparagus? I know if we explain it to him he'll understand."

There were so many dishes to choose from after the first course that I couldn't make up my mind.

Finally I said to my wife, "Remember that house we were going to buy in Martha's Vineyard?"

"The one overlooking the ocean?"

"That's the one," I said. "Let's have the lobster instead."

"You mean you'd rather have lobster than own a house on Martha's Vineyard?"

"But this lobster is cooked in a special cream sauce of chef. It could be years before we have a lobster like this again. We have to think of our old age."

"I don't know," my wife said. "I had my heart set on that house."

"Well, I have my heart set on lobster and, since they're both the same price, I think our stomachs should come first."

The waiter handed me the wine card. "There's a very nice Pouilly Fuisse," I said.

"Can we afford it?" my wife asked.

"We can if we sell the car when we get back home."

"I need a car," she protested.

"All right," I said. "We'll order an inexpensive Sancerre and cancel the orthodontist's work on Connie's teeth."

My wife was becoming agitated. "If it's costing this much for dinner, how are we going to pay our hotel bill?"

"Will you stop worrying? What do you think the World Bank is for?"

A conservative view

Good law in Nixon's argument

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — It is understandable, but it is also regrettable, that so little public attention has been paid to President Nixon's letter of June 10 to Peter Rodino. The letter provides an excellent statement of Nixon's reasons for refusing to surrender further tapes and documents to the House Judiciary Committee.

Kilpatrick

Unfortunately, this long letter was released at a time when editors were struggling with a torrent of news. The President was off to the Mideast. Henry Kissinger was erupting in Salzburg. In Washington, the Judiciary Committee was leaking like a rusty bucket. Few newspapers had space to print the text of Nixon's letter, and few readers would have had time for it anyhow. The letter deserved something better.

The situation, in brief, is that the House committee had issued subpoenas demanding that the President surrender certain records. The President refused to honor the subpoenas. His reasons are solidly rooted in the doctrine of separation of powers.

"While many functions of government require the concurrence or interaction of two or more branches," Nixon wrote, "each branch historically has been steadfast in maintaining its own independence by turning back attempts of the others, whenever made, to assert an authority to invade, without consent, the privacy of its own deliberations."

Nixon supplied examples. In 1962, a federal district court issued a subpoena to the Senate, demanding certain evidence for use in the trial of James Hoffa. The Senate, by formal resolution, flatly refused to comply. More recently, in the case of Lt. William Calley, the House Armed Services Committee refused to provide evidence demanded by Calley's attorneys. Chairman Edward Hebert based his refusal on precisely the same grounds invoked by Nixon today.

The judicial branch has taken the same view. In 1953, the House Un-American Activities Committee attempted to subpoena Justice Tom Clark. He refused to obey the subpoena. "The independence of the three branches of our government," said Clark, "is the cardinal principle on which our constitutional system is founded."

In his letter of June 10, Nixon cited a further example. In 1962, a Senate subcommittee demanded certain information from President Kennedy. When he refused to supply it, Sen. John Stennis of Mississippi upheld Kennedy's position: "I know of no case where the Court has ever made the Senate or the House surrender records from its files, or where the Executive has made the Legislative Branch surrender records from its files — and I do not think either of them could. So the rule works three ways. Each is supreme within its field, and each is responsible within its field."

This strikes me as sound doctrine. It is not the power of the law, it is only the power of public opinion that makes presidents obey court orders. As the Supreme Court long ago acknowledged in Mississippi v. Johnson, a Reconstruction case, a federal court is powerless to enforce any order a president chooses to ignore. It is universally assumed that if Rodino's committee were to ask a federal court to approve its subpoenas, and if a court should order Nixon to comply, Nixon would obey. But Rodino's refusal to seek judicial aid is in itself a reflection of the doctrine of separation of powers. A House committee does not want to leave an impression that it is subject to court orders.

Nixon is right in the position he has taken. He is right, that is, as a matter of law. The presidential office simply cannot be made a happy hunting ground for grandstanding federal judges and bloodthirsty congressmen, not even in the name of impeachment. The presidency could not survive as we know it.

But if Nixon's law is fine, his public relations are awful. By refusing voluntarily to give the House committee what it wants, Nixon creates the impression that he has something to hide. The most beautifully reasoned letters ever composed will not dispel that inference now.

Stalin's comeback

At the same time the Soviet Union strives to present a benign face to the world in keeping with the policy of detente, it continues to resurrect the image of its most unbenign leader, Josef Stalin.

Paul Wohl, writing in the Christian Science Monitor, reports that the "Great Stalin" is the focal point of the second part of a popular novel by Ivan Stadnyuk, "War," recently published in Russia.

Stalin's accomplishments as a military leader are praised by the Red Army through its leading marshals. And in the theater and on film the former dictator is presented in a sympathetic light.

All of this is in sharp contrast to the early 60s, when "de-Stalinization" was adopted as the official party line by Premier Nikita Khrushchev. Then, Russians were given at least a glimpse of a Stalin who had made life a living nightmare for millions of his countrymen.

Since then the enormity of the crimes committed by Stalin has emerged more clearly, including the purges, the concentration camps, and the liquidations in the Ukraine where millions of peasants died.

The exiled Russian writer Alexander Solzhenitsyn has eloquently and courageously told the story of the real Stalin and his times. But one can only join him in lamenting the plight of the Russian people at large, who still do not know their own history.

Merry-go-round

Nixon's Moscow visit worries NATO allies

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — On his way to Moscow, President Nixon stopped off in Brussels to sign a NATO charter and to smile for the cameras. But behind the show of cordiality, our NATO friends are secretly worried that the President will give more than he will gain at the Moscow summit meeting.

This nagging concern appears in confidential draft reports prepared for the North Atlantic Assembly, which gathered in Washington earlier this month.

The reports reveal that some NATO leaders believe the President has already signed away the Western military advantage. The result "could give the Soviet Union tremendous superiority in numbers of warheads and total 'throw-weight,'" warns one report.

NATO leaders are frankly suspicious of detente. "Detente in Soviet eyes," states another report, "is clearly to achieve recognition by the West of the political situation in Eastern Europe and to secure for the East as much economic and technological benefit as can be gained."

Unfortunately, adds the report, the political softening has been accompanied by a military tightening throughout the Soviet bloc. "Hence the price of detente in the political sphere," the report warns, "is increased readiness and vigilance in the military sphere."

A report on "Atlantic Political Problems," takes blunt notice of the "domestic problems" besetting President Nixon. These, according to the report, "threaten to severely handicap his ... authority."

Declares the confidential document: "Most people would now acknowledge that above all, the President needs a major foreign policy initiative to counter the domestic issues that threaten to engulf him."

"This in turn increases the suspicion of his critics that he will seek a major agreement with the Soviet Union that will have more to do with domestic prestige than the longterm foreign policy interests of the country."

In one report, the latest U.S. doctrine that "nuclear attack would be met by whatever scale of launch the circumstances demanded" is described as a "dangerous development."

This permits "a theoretical approach to nuclear weapons which is out of touch with political reality," the document charges. "It implies the possibility of waging limited nuclear war and the expression of such a possibility is a regressive step."

Not only do NATO leaders look with apprehension on the edge which President Nixon has already given the Soviet Union in missile numbers and payload, but the NATO partners are also concerned about the balance of troops and equipment in Europe.

The Soviet satellites, according to one report, could unleash a force of 925,000 men, 15,500 tanks and 2,800 aircraft "with very little warning." As a defense, the NATO nations have only 770,000 men, 6,000 tanks and 2,700 aircraft.

So despite appearances, our European allies aren't united behind the President as he sits down to bargain with Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev.

MISUSED MILLIONS: The major airlines have stuffed $30 million, collected from passengers to combat hijacking, into their corporate coffers.

The rip-off has been known to federal regulators for a year. But only after goading by Rep. John Murphy, D-N.Y., and a few others has the government stopped the airlines from misusing the anti-hijacking funds.

The Civil Aeronautics Board, however, has done nothing to recover the $30 million from the airlines. Here's how the air passengers have been taken, with the connivance of the CAB which is supposed to protect them.

At the height of the hijackings in 1972, the government ordered airports and airlines to take special security precautions. The costs were supposed to be met by socking the passengers 59 cents per ticket.

A 1973 audit, however, showed that the average airline spent only 35 cents per ticket on the new security set-up. The remaining 24 cents were merely added to the profits. At nearly a quarter a ticket, the extra revenue quickly mounted up to $30 million.

Brides sound

a sour note

I am writing in regard to your article in Monday's paper entitled, "Weddings: they'll cost only what you let them."

With all due respect to the brides interviewed, I would like to point out that the majority of wedding soloists and organists are professionally trained musicians and should be reimbursed for their services accordingly. After all, if a friend of yours baked your wedding cake, you would pay her, wouldn't you? Or if one of your friends owns the restaurant where you have the reception, you wouldn't think of paying them with a gift.

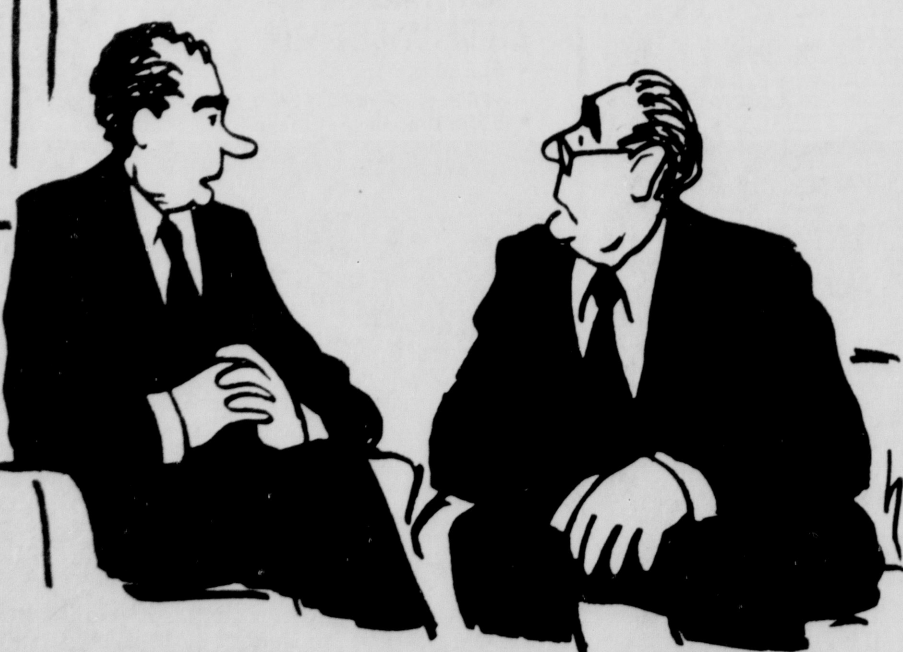

So, future brides, even if you ask your friends to provide your wedding music, please realize that they have other friends who will also ask them to sing or play at THEIR wedding. After all, who needs five pairs of cufflinks every summer?

Thank you for listening to the musician's side of the story.

Summer playclothes for girls

Sugar and spice and everything nice, that's the way little girls used to dress, but in the summer of '74 they dress for action. The perfect answer: pretty things that play hard and still look sweet. The new dress-and-pants look can take the tough treatment today's girls give their clothes. Because they're knit, they come up smiling wash after wash.

Wool trousers feed allergy

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is trying to carry on a conversation with someone wearing sun glasses. I think it is very rude for people to keep them on unless they have an eye problem. Sun glasses are a wonderful protection in harsh sunlight but after entering a building when they are no longer needed, it is very distracting to try to talk to someone whose eyes are hidden behind these dark glasses. The expression in one's eyes are what makes any conversation either interesting or not. — MARIE

DEAR POLLY — Do tell Helen who has trouble keeping her foam rubber mattress in place that I put a flannel sheet between mine and the springs. It has worked very well. — H.G.U.

DEAR POLLY — I had the same trouble as Helen with my foam mattress. I put an old fitted sheet on the box spring, a cotton mattress cover on the mattress and then the bed pad and have no more trouble with it slipping. I do hope this works for her. — ANNA

DEAR POLLY — When I had the same problem as Helen has with a foam mattress slipping I bought a full bed-size package of a thin foam material and placed it under the mattress. We have not touched it since. I bought the regular full size even though the bed is queen size. This material was very inexpensive, was pre-cut and came in a sealed package. — CLARA

McRae comes through in 12th

Splittorff spell over Sox continues

KANSAS CITY (AP) — It's putting it mildly to say pitcher Paul Splittorff has the number of the Chicago White Sox. Splittorff whipped the White Sox Wednesday night for the eighth time in his last eight appearances against them, all in starting roles. This time, the score was 2-1, and it took 12 innings.

Splittorff quipped afterward: "It's getting harder for me to beat those guys, though, but I'm on a streak against them, and I might as well keep it going as long as I can."

The 12-inning stint was the longest for Splittorff, 8-7, in his major league baseball career. The left-hander's arm was already buried in the ice bucket when Hal McRae delivered the 12th-inning single that scored Frank White with the winning run off reliever Rich Gossage, 0-1.

Royals Manager Jack McKeon told Splittorff he was tired after 12 innings.

"If Split hadn't retired Carlos May in the 12th to end the inning," McKeon said, "he wasn't going to face Dick Allen again. I wasn't going to extend him any more. I thought he was losing his stuff."

Allen, who would have been the first batter in the 13th had the game not ended, belted a king-sized home run off Splittorff leading off the ninth to tie the game 1-1 and send it into extra innings. It was Allen's 18th blast of the season.

"It was a hanging curve ball and a stupid pitch," Splittorff said of the Allen blow. "That was the longest home run ever hit in this stadium. Allen hits one of them off of me every game.

"That's five home runs Allen has hit off me in three years, and I bet he's not hitting .200 against me."

McRae had a hand in both Royals runs. Cookie Rojas led off the sixth with a double off starter Jim Kaat. McRae singled off third baseman Bill Melton's glove, and Rojas went to third.

Fran Healy drilled abunt toward first baseman Allen and was tagged out as Rojas scored.

White singled with one out in the 12th, and Amos Otis walked. McRae, who connected for three of the Royals' 10 hits as did Rojas, stroked a single to right, and White raced home.

McRae, now batting .329, said he changed his batting stance in the series in Detroit less than two weeks ago "but I won't say how. I may not keep it a secret but I don't have to tell the pitchers."

Chris needs 46 games to win

Evert, Hunt match ties record for longest ever at Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Chris Evert came back from a darkness-delayed match, reeled off two games and beat Lesley Hunt 8-6, 5-7, 11-9 today, equaling the longest women's singles match in Wimbledon history.

Only in 1970, when Margaret Court took 46 games to beat Billie Jean King in the final, 14-12, 11-9, have women competed so long on Wimbledon's center court.

After Miss Evert, the No. 2 seed from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and her unranked Australian opponent duelled for 2 hours, 45 minutes Wednesday and Miss Evert appeared on the brink of defeat, she re-bounced for the triumph today in only six minutes before play on other courts again was halted by rain.

Among the players caught by today's rain was Bjorn Borg, the No. 5 seed from Sweden who was locked in a duel with Ross Case of Australia when their match was called by darkness Wednesday.

Borg nearly forfeited his match Wednesday in a fit of pique.

Miss Evert, in her 1974 debut halted 3½ hours by a cold rain, won the first set 8-6, lost the second 5-7 and was tied in the third 9-9. Borg, playing a second-round match, was leading two sets to one but trailing the fourth 1-4 after deliberately hitting two shots out of the stadium in anger because the match wasn't stopped sooner in deference to the hour.

When the two teen-agers arrived at Wimbledon, they had wrapped up the 1974 Italian and French titles and appeared the obvious threats to the established stars of this staid old classic.

Super-confident and virtually contemptuous before play started, Miss Evert, 19, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Borg, 18, of Sweden, declared they feared no one and caused consternation among some veteran Wimbledon observers.

Top-seeded John Newcombe, the 30-year-old Australian who has won here three times, warned it would take more than youthful strength to win the singles trophies.

"Matches on the center court at Wimbledon are won and lost up here," Newcombe said, touching his head. "Ability and power are not enough."

Newcombe and fellow veterans Stan Smith and Ilie Nastase advanced comfortably to the third round.

Borg was struggling against Case and stormed off the court in the fourth set, complaining it was too dark to see, only to be ordered back to play or forfeit the match. After shouts from spectators that "it's not too dark for Newcombe," he grudgingly returned, wearing his orange sweat suit, and angrily knocked two serves over the fence before the match was called.

Miss Evert, usually cool and confident, seemed disappointed that her match couldn't continue despite the fact she and her Australian opponent had been playing for 2 hours, 45 minutes.

Holland shines in World Cup

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — Can anything stop Johnny Cruyff and his team of flying Dutchmen? That's the question at soccer's 1974 World Cup, and the answer, according to Argentine Coach Vladislao Cap, is no.

Cap saw his men take a 4-0 beating from Cruyff and Holland Wednesday night and said later of the Dutchmen: "They are the finest team I have ever seen."

The accent was on the word team. Many critics, and many coaches, thought that when they came here, Holland would prove a one-man band, with Cruyff the only thoroughbred.

It hasn't worked that way. However, Cruyff, with two goals against the Argentinians, remains the outstanding personality of this world cup.

He is quick to point out that Holland's results have been built on teamwork.

After rows in camp, mainly over money, the club has settled down to playing a team game.

Cruyff pinpointed this after the 4-1 victory over Bulgaria in the first round. "We are now playing like Ajax at their best," he told newsmen.

Cruyff played for Ajax before his record-breaking transfer to Barcelona last year. The Dutch team is packed with Ajax players, and Cruyff has settled quickly into a devastating partnership with his former club-mate, Johnny Rep.

With Cruyff's team heading for the top of Group A in this eight-team second round, Holland could face West Germany in the final at Munich's Olympic Stadium July 7.

The West Germans beat the powerful Yugoslavs 2-0 at Dusseldorf.

Manager Helmut Schoen brought in Uli Hoessens as a second half substitute, and he revitalized the German attack and set up a goal late in the game.

Jim Rooker holds Cards to 3 hits in 7-2 victory

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Outspoken Jim Rooker has a 4-6 record for baseball's struggling Pittsburgh Pirates and thinks the mark could be 12-2.

"I've had 14 starts," the intense left-hander noted Wednesday night after disposing of the St. Louis Cardinals 7-2 on a tidy three-hitter marred by two late Pirate errors.

"The only bad game I think I pitched was in Cincinnati when I gave up six runs," he added. "In Montreal I gave up four runs in five innings. I really think I could have won 10 games."

Rooker's frustration lay partially with the unavailing 3.07 earned run average he took into the game and partly with spotty Pirate play afield.

"The way we've been playing most of the year gives you an idea," he said in reference to his record.

"I don't think that it's my luck that's involved," he declared. "I think it's the club's luck. I feel I'm doing my job."

Rooker, whose last previous outing was a 3-2 loss, was perfect in the game against the Cardinals until Mike Tyson singled with one out in the third.

Then the 31-year-old former American Leaguer set down 17 in a row before Tyson was safe

Elmore, Pacers agree

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The Indiana Pacers, winners of three American Basketball Association championships with All-Star center Mel Daniels, hoped to add strength in the middle today with a 6-foot-9 rookie from the University of Maryland.

The Pacers called a news conference today "to announce the signing of a major player."

Pacer General Manager John Weissert all but admitted Wednesday night the player was Len Elmore, All-Atlantic Coast Conference center for the fourth-ranked Terps last season.

Elmore was not at his New York home Wednesday night and his grandmother said he had left already for Indianapolis.

Asked if Elmore would be at the news conference, Weissert said, "Yes."

Daniels, 28, is the only player in the ABA to have played in all seven of the young league's All-Star games. The 6-foot-9 veteran was Rookie of the Year in 1968, Most Valuable Player in 1969 and 1971 and the first player to score 10,000 career points in the ABA.

Elmore was picked by Indiana in the first round of the 1973 ABA undergraduate draft. Both he and Weissert said earlier Wednesday that he had not signed a contract.

Elmore added, "Money isn't the only consideration. Security means a great deal. I have to admit that Indiana is one of the most stable teams in the ABA."

Bob Ferry, general manager of the Capital Bullets of the National Basketball Association, told the Washington Star-News that he and club owner Abe Pollin were upset with the reports that Elmore would sign with Indiana.

Howe's sons also named

Cheevers, Hull, Howe picked for hockey series with Russia

CALGARY, Alta. (AP) — Three superstars who missed an opportunity to play for Team Canada '72 in the international hockey showdown between Canada and the Soviet Union learned officially Wednesday they'll get their chance this fall.

Coach Billy Harris of the Toronto Toros and General Manager Bill Hunter of the Edmonton Oilers of the World Hockey Association said goaltender Gerry Cheevers of the Cleveland Crusaders and forwards Bobby Hull of the Winnipeg Jets and Gordie Howe of the Houston Aeros have been selected.

"The adrenalin is flowing already," said Hull, who jumped to the WHA from the Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League shortly before Team Canada '72 was selected.

Cheevers jumped from the Boston Bruins of the NHL after being named. Howe ended his career with the Detroit Red Wings the season before the squad was formed. Only players with the NHL were selected for the previous Team Canada squad.

Also selected to the 25-man squad scheduled to open training camp Sept. 1 in Edmonton were Howe's sons, Mark and Marty, teammates at Houston.

Harris, coach of the year in the WHA last season, said additional players will be named before Aug. 1.

Cheevers got his first exposure to international competition when he sparked the Western Canada Hockey League all-stars to a 7-5 victory over the powerful Moscow Selects in an exhibition game in Edmonton last season.

Hunter, also general manager of Edmonton Oil Kings of the WHA, announced the major league will prepare Team Canada '74 for its eight-game series with the Soviets.

The extreme speed of the Soviet national team provided most of Team Canada's problems in the first series two years ago. This year Team Canada will prepare against a group of junior all-stars.

"We know the juniors will make us skate," said Hunter.

Harris, Hunter and Hull each said they have not received one negative response from the WHA players they have approached. Hull also has spoken to Bobby Orr and Phil Esposito of the NHL Boston Bruins but has not received a commitment.

Hull told a news conference the two Boston superstars both seemed interested at first, and all three Team Canada spokesmen left the door open for entry by some NHL players although league owners have said they can't compete.

Trade turkeys for pheasants

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The state conservation commission announced Wednesday that it has approved the largest trade of wild game with another state.

Over the next three years, the commission said, 260 Missouri wild turkeys will be sent to Iowa in return for 5,000 pheasants. The trade is aimed at extending the pheasant range in Missouri from 17 counties where pheasant hunting is permitted.

The commission also said there are wild game trades being planned with Texas and Wisconsin, which will see the exchange of Missouri wild turkeys for ruffed grouse.

NFL strike closer as talks break off

WASHINGTON (AP) — A strike that could eliminate the National Football League exhibition season appeared probable today after NFL owners and players reached a major impasse in new contract negotiations.

The NFL Players Association has said the union will strike Monday unless its 63 demands, including the so-called "freedom demands," are met.

The contract talks were broken off Wednesday after two hours of discussions, midway through a scheduled three-day meeting that began Tuesday.

Federal mediator James Searce said the negotiations had reached a point "where we cannot be constructive."

Searce said the two parties have agreed to meet upon his call but both owners and players agreed the strike will take place Monday, two days before San Diego is to open the first of the 26 NFL training camps.

"The gauntlet is down," declared Bill Curry of the Houston Oilers, NFLPA president. "There is going to have to be a power play. We're going to have to conduct a strike."

The players' union declined to estimate how long the impending strike might last but said the organization planned to set up picket lines around the annual College All-Star game in Chicago July 26 and the training sites of the two teams involved, including the Super Bowl champion Miami Dolphins.

John Thompson, executive director of the NFL Management Council, the owners' bargaining agent, said the owners attempted to explain Wednesday the report made public several weeks ago showing that each team made a pretax profit of $940,000 last season. The union claims the owners made approximately $2.3 million apiece.

After the morning session, the two sides broke for lunch. When they returned, however, Searce met with the players after talking to the owners and said it would be better to recess the negotiations.

Royals, Tuttle come to terms

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Bob Tuttle, a free agent second baseman from Central Missouri State University and son of a former major league outfielder, has been signed by the Kansas City Royals.

Tuttle, son of Bill Tuttle who played for Detroit, Kansas City and Minnesota, was assigned to Waterloo, Iowa, in the Midwest League.

The 21-year-old Tuttle had a collegiate career batting average of .344 and hit for a .380 average in his senior year. He holds the CSMU records for hits, 49, and runs, 32, and also led the team in stolen bases with 14.

Strong finish

PORTLAND, Ore. — Gary Dickinson of Fort Worth, Tex., finishing with eight consecutive strikes, won the $55,000 Winston-Salem Open, defeating Butch Soper 260 to 248 in the finals of the Professional Bowlers Association tournament.

Western Open underway

Watson confident victory is near

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — "I'm getting impatient," Tom Watson said, that funny half-shy, half-determined smile on his freckled face.

"I've been in position to win a lot of times, and it hasn't happened. It always seems that something happens, something bad—I hit it out of bounds or I get it wet or something—just when I'm ready."

"I'm sure that I can do it. I'm sure I can win. It just hasn't happened yet."

The sturdy redhead, only 24 and possessed of the massive, burly forearms of a young Palmer, takes his quest for his first pro victory into the $200,000 Western Open Golf Tournament this week and ranks high among the list of favorites for the $40,000 first prize.

Eagles finalize draft signings

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Eagles of the National Football League have completed negotiations for 1974 draft choices with the signing of Artimus Parker, Southern California defensive back, and Bill Brittain, a lineman from Kansas State, it was announced Wednesday.

American teenagers meet Russian stars

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — International socializing will turn into on-the-field competition Friday when United States and Russian teen-agers begin seeking track and field victories for themselves and their countries.

The competition is restricted to men 19 or younger and women 18 or younger.

It will be third annual junior meet involving the men. The Soviets won the first meet in 1972 at Sacramento, Calif., 124-108, and the United States won last year at Odessa, USSR, 123-108.

In the first meeting between the women last year, the Russians won 74-71.

The teams were feted this week at a fish fry, barbecue and rodeo, and reception at the governor's mansion.

Both teams were outfitted in cowboy hats and blue jeans.

"It's just friendly competition," said Russian high jumper Sergei Seniukov.

Game of tennis stands to lose the most through wars, disputes

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Tennis seems bent on suicide.

Not content with having broken out of the corset strings of stuffy administrators who stifled progress for half a century, the game now is on the verge of being devoured by greed and internal strife over the spectator dollar.

The latest development is a $10 million suit filed by World Team Tennis against Jack Kramer, director of the Players' Association, and Donald Dell, the group's counsel, charging a conspiracy to destroy WTT.

So here we go again. From the tennis courts to the law courts. Nobody wins. Tennis loses.

With no attempt to prejudice the action, it appears that the wonderful game of tennis, now enjoying an unprecedented popularity boom as a participant sport, is locking itself into an endless war such as the AAU-NCAA dispute which has threatened to wreck American Olympic teams.

Big-time tennis, as a spectator sport, has to suffer. Such feuds and controversies only tend to turn people off. Tennis is destroying the goose that is in the process of laying the golden egg.

The Wimbledon fields were bled to impotency by bans and boycotts the past two years. Then the fussing factions came together to bring all the best players together again on the manicured lawns of the best tournament of the world.

Peace seemed at hand. Everybody sighed in relief. Now another suit. Players belonging to both WTT and the Players' Association are torn by a conflict of interest. Everybody's mad again.

World Team Tennis is the sore spot. Wimbledon and other tennis fundamentalists don't like the concept. It's different. It is a threat to the European circuit, which thrived for years on tennis gypsies and hypocritical under-the-table payments until the game went open in 1968.

Tennis purists want to destroy WTT. They acknowledge it. One of the steps was to bar Jimmy Connors and Evonne Goolagong from the French Championships because they were under contract to WTT. The $10 million suit was the direct outgrowth.

The purists can achieve nothing by harassment or blocking action. Some people say WTT is great—different and exciting. Others say it's ridiculous.

If the paychecks are big enough, the good players will come. If the show proves exciting enough to draw the fans, nothing can stop it.

Sir Dinadan, the worst swordsman of the round table and the worst player of the square table was very proud of himself for not opening with a two bid.

Mordred sitting North raised one spade to two and Dinadan burst into the convention just invented by Sir Easley of the Blackwood and settled for six when Mordred could not produce a king.

He won the first trick with dummy's ace of hearts and remarked, "Maybe we didn't bid enough." He then led dummy's deuce of spades and went up with his ace. Lancelot, sitting West, showed out and poor Dinadan had no way to go but down.

Mordred drew his sword. "Haven't you ever heard of safety plays?" he roared. "You didn't need to make seven, but you were sure of your slam if you simply played your seven of trumps on East's six spot."

"Put your sword back, Mordred," said Lancelot. "Of course, he should have made certain of his contract by playing the seven of trumps. However, we lose enough knights to our enemies without having to kill them ourselves. Furthermore, remember you play against him twice as often as you play with him."

Corporate aid for Democrats uncovered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The staff of the Senate Watergate committee says it has evidence Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey's former campaign manager helped engineer a scheme to funnel $137,000 in illegal corporate aid to Democrats, including Humphrey.

The campaign manager, Minneapolis attorney Jack L. Chestnut, refused to testify under oath about the affair on grounds he might tend to incriminate himself, the staff said in a confidential report.

A former top campaign aid to Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, Joe P. Johnson, also invoked the Fifth Amendment and refused to testify about apparently illegal aid to Mills' brief 1972 presidential campaign, the report said.

It said Humphrey's 1972 presidential campaign got $25,000 in apparently illegal corporate aid from the nation's largest dairy cooperative, Associated Milk Producers, Inc. The $25,000 was part of $137,000 in illegal AMPI contributions, the report said.

Opposition toward ticket tax surfaces

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A proposal to tax every ticket sold at the twin-stadium Harry S. Truman Sports Complex has drawn the opposition of the major league baseball and football teams in Kansas City.

Harold L. Holliday Jr., a Jackson County legislator, proposed the tax to retire revenue bonds sold to construct the home stadiums of the baseball Royals and the football Chiefs.

When the bonds are retired the revenue from the taxes would go to the county general fund under Holliday's proposal.

Attorneys for both teams told the legislature Wednesday the plan would violate the spirit of lease agreements with the Jackson County Sports Complex Authority.

Stanley Christopher, county counselor, said he would issue an opinion on the legality of the plan in about 10 days.

Steel firms handed big cash fines

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Four major steel companies were fined $50,000 apiece Wednesday after pleading no contest to charges of violating anti-trust laws in Louisiana.

The companies were Armco Steel Corp. of Middletown, Ohio; the Ceco Corp. of Chicago; H.K. Porter Co. Inc., of Pittsburgh; and Laclede Steel Co. of St. Louis, Mo.

Charles F. Jones, Porter's steel division sales manager, also pleaded no contest and was fined $5,000 and given a suspended prison sentence.

The defendants were indicted several months ago and accused of fixing the price of reinforcing steel bars in Louisiana.

U.S. Dist. Judge James A. Comiskey said one company was selected to submit the low bid on public and private contracts while other companies refrained from bidding or deliberately bid high.

The judge said this paralyzed competition.

"Purchasers of steel in this area were deprived of the benefits of competitive bidding and competitive price competition," he said.

"We have here an incident where big business by conspiracy boosted and fixed prices by eliminating competition. This action is absolutely contrary to the American concept of free enterprise and a violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust law."

Other defendants in the same case who have pleaded innocent include the following: Southern Industrial Steel Corp., of New Orleans, and its president, A.A. Boudousque, Jr.; Harry H. Gray, Armco's former assistant southwest sales manager; Robert F. Krejcu, Ceco's New Orleans regional manager; and John Bean, New Orleans regional manager for Laclede.

Presenting the 84 mpg Volkswagen.

Since all the car manufacturers are conducting their own mileage tests these days, we at Volkswagen thought we'd conduct one too.

So we modified our body—and our engine. And, of course, we got someone who didn't weigh much to drive.

Lo and behold, we got 84 miles per gallon! Ridiculous? Nobody normally drives like this? Of course. That's precisely our point.

Nobody normally drives like most of those tests you're seeing.

Volkswagen: An honest 25* miles per gallon.
